

Lot 6

Auction Decorative Art

Date 18.11.2020, ca. 10:03

Preview 13.11.2020 - 10:00:00 bis
16.11.2020 - 18:00:00

LARGE PORCELAIN FIGURINE OF A PELICAN EATING A CARP.

Meissen.

Maker/Designer: Model J.J. Kaendler, 1732. Moulding 20th century.

Technique: Porcelain, white.

Description: Life size figure of a pelican devouring a fish. The animal's posture suggests that it is portrayed floating on the water.

Measurement: Height 74,5cm, length 75,5cm.

Mark: Swordsmark with 2 grinds. Porcelain former no. 149C, Model no. 76006 stamped.

Provenance:

Private collection Rhineland

Literature:

-Sponsel, Jean Louis: Kabinettstücke der Meissner Porzellanmanufaktur von Johann Joachim Kaendler, Leipzig 1900, p.65/96.

-Sponsel, p. 96: Reference to: Merian, Matthäus: In- und ausländische nach dem Leben gemalte Vögel, verfertigt zu Frankfurth am Main von Matthia Merian ao. 1659.

-Pietsch, Ulrich: Meißner Porzellanplastik von Gottlieb Kirchner und Johann Joachim Kaendler, Munich 2006, cf. p.150, cat. no.221.

The pelican is a prime example for Kaendler's method. While trying to devour a fish, the large bird has tilted its head far back. The neck is curved in a dynamic movement, the eyes wide open. Every detail, be it the plumage, the scales of the fish or the structure of the skin of the throat bag, is carefully studied. Kaendler's depiction of a bird occupied with its prey, which he used again and again, combines the lifelike depiction of the animal with the demonstration of the modeller's artistic abilities. In fact, the existence of a pelican in Dresden's Tiergarten is evidenced by a picture by Matthäus Merian, which is in the Dresden Kupferstichkabinett. The depiction is titled 'a large pelican as can be seen in the Dresden royal fishgarden 1728'. It is therefore quite possible that a living example of the exotic bird served Kaendler as a model for his sculpture.

Estimate: 15.000 € - 20.000 €; Hammer: 19.000 €