The creator of this painting, Stanislas Lépine, was a pupil of the important representative of the Barbizon School, Camille Corot. The group, which met in the small town of Barbizon near the forest of Fontainebleau, is characterised by a deep longing for originality. Landscape motifs under the influence of daylight and the weather were particularly attractive. It seems windy and yet there is a bustle of activity at the harbour in Rouen, France. The cloudy sky and the waving flags indicate the slightly stormy mood. Despite this, the painting radiates an almost contemplative calm.

Estimate: 12.000 € - 15.000 €
