With Parkett magazine.

"Sylvie Fleury's 'studio work' thus takes place in all the various realms of social added-value production and fetishization, and she whirls together - codes pertaining to fashion, art, high and low culture, models of male and female self-configuration - appropriating and playing with self-images, life-models, and forms of existence in styling and manner that in effect pulverizes every last hierarchy of sex, class, and genre."

Beatrix Ruf, Parkett no. 58, 2000.
