"Well, of the top of my head, there's a connection with certain currents in British Painting - artists such as R. B. Kitaj and Stanley Spencer - and with German painters like Otto Dix or the Austrian, Gustav Klimt. On top of this, I'm interested in processes, in the production of pathos - as in the work of Käthe Kollwitz, for instance. One characteristic of my paintings is certainly the use of trompe-l'oeil effects, flat picture grounds, and a form of literalness. I like insidiousness and things that are supposed to manipulate the viewer. But probably the biggest influence on my painting technique is my dilettantism."
