"Her work dramatizes, in many different ways, the primal violence of socialisation - the invariably traumatic way in which each individual must be 'inserted' into an ever-widening set of social, institutional frames: family, school, community, nation. And this rite of passage is for her characters as for each of us never a total success - indeed, it is often a botched job."

Adrian Martin, Parkett no. 53, 1998.
