With Parkett magazine.

"Muñoz's sculptures are inviable, incomplete, restricted bodies that no longer define a human, integral, and self-determined posture, but rather a semi-, pseudo-, or post-human condition in which the place of the body is less the result of the positive affirmation of a will, an individuality, or a desire than the result of a system of external spatial relations and determinations."
Alexandre Melo, Parkett no. 43, 1995.
