"Discussing her work, Singh has said, 'It's the dream, it's that time between waking and sleeping'. Like memories, her photographs lie dormant, waiting to be reawakened. The sleeping girl is fixed first in one place, then another, she is fugitive and multiple, finding different company, making different connections. She is in Delhi and London and Paris and New York, and no doubt countless other places too."

James Lingwood, Parkett no. 95, 2014.
