With his unusual and also innovative pictures, objects, installations and exhibitions John M. Armleder is one of the most influential European concept- and performance contemporary artist. 1986 he manages his international breakthrough with the design of the Swiss pavillon at the Venice Biennale followed by the participation in the documenta in Kassel the following year. Since then he received many awards and presents his works in many exhibitions, lastly in the retrospective due to his 70th birthday in 2018 in Museo d'Arte Contemporanea Donnaregina in Naples and in Museion Bozen.

Armleder coins the conventions in the art of the 20th century concerning the topic of his works. He constantly deals with the question: Can an artist still make enduring art despite the constant overwhelming amount of images and trivialization of the art due to mass media? Armleder deconstructs the art freely, changes directions and dedicated himself towards a subversive-analytical exam. Here he formally adapts the modern constructivism, the op- and pop-art as well as the gestural-abstract painting. Humorously but subtle he refers to artistic references and finds unconventional poetic and ironic formulations to our today's reality and to today's status of art without giving them any deeper sense. At the same time he combines advanced civilisation with everyday life in his works, profound and banal, planning and coincidence to an ambiguous and unique experience outside and inside in which we are often incorporated.

With his kinetic neon works to which the present work "Untitled (target)" belongs Armleder discusses a fundamental element in the art: The light. With different colours, concentric circles arranged neon pipes Armleder investigates the interplay of colour. He uses the neon for his original use - visualising things but more precisely visualising circumstances. Conciously he takes this original idea and transfers this into an artistic context. Lastly, the artist gives the viewer a certain kind of space. Due to Armleder's new contextualisation of the medium neon the artist generally deals with the perception and thus, dissects the fundamental characteristics of art.
